FIRST BRITISH ELECTION IN 10 YEARS ON TODAY

One Of Closest Contests In English History Is Anticipated

CHURCHILL MAY LOSE OUT

Optimistic Conservatives See Only Bare Majority In Commons Voting

LONDON, July 5—An estimated 27,000,000 voters went to the polls for Britain's first general election in ten years today. Political observers saw a possibility of a swing to the left that could unseat Prime Minister Churchill's conservative government.

All signs pointed to one of the closest contests in British history, matching the bitterness of the campaign.

Churchill himself laid down a blunt ideological challenge to the opposition when he invaded the laborites' southwest London strongholds last night for his final speech of the campaign.

Ignoring catcalls and exploding firecrackers tossed by hecklers in the crowd, Churchill declared that the course of all Europe hinges on the British election.

"They are looking from the continent to see which way Britain is going to go," he said. "If there should be a landslide to the left, many countries on the continent would slide not into decent socialism but into the violence of communism. If we go down, all the ninepins of Europe will fall."

Looking old and tired after the most strenuous of his 16 election campaigns, the prime minister nevertheless radiated belligerent confidence at each of his many street corner stops.

At one point, a "thunderflash"—a noisemaking power charge used by the home guard in practice drills—exploded within 10 feet of Churchill.

He flinched slightly and halted his speech to watch police seize the prankster, a 17-year-old boy.

Churchill smiled slightly and told the police: "don't hurt the little fool."

His chief opponent, Laborite Leader Clement Attlee, also finished his campaign before a crowd of 1,500 persons at Bethnal Green, where he denounced the conservatives for injecting "bogies" into the election.

"We are asking that, for the first time in the history of Britain, a working class party should be given power to carry out a policy that puts the interests of the common man first," said Attlee.

Predictions on the outcome were a dime a dozen, but most London newspapers shied away from making any detailed forecasts on the composition of the next parliament.

Even the most optimistic conservatives in their pre-election forecasts were expecting to win a bare majority of the 640 seats in commons.

Other analysts saw the likelihood of a coalition government.

Truman Orders Goodyear Seizure

Ex-Jap Prisoner Home To Die

A living skeleton from two and a half years of Jap imprisonment, Cpl. James E. Newman holds the hand of his mother at his Fort Worth, Tex., home where Army doctors allowed him to return to await death, expected in only a few days. Wasted and disease-wracked, the corporal declared at home, "I'm going to get well. I've had some of Mom's biscuits."

Hero Given Bare Chance To Get Well

FORT WORTH, Tex., July 5—Cpl. Jim Newman, the Bataan hero whom medical opinion has deemed to death, today was given a slim fighting chance to survive Japanese brutality.

Dr. Jack Daley, inspired by his ever cheerful patient's indomitable courage, said the 25 year old living skeleton—he weighs only 92 pounds—had one chance in a thousand to live.

Corporal Jim's dauntless spirit and avowed certainty he would cheat death, Dr. Daley said, might pull him through—despite his starved condition and the illnesses that struck him during three horrible years in a Japanese prison camp.

Courage and prayer—Jim said prayer alone kept him alive on Luzon—might save the Fort Worth soldier if he lives a few more days, his physician explained.

But Dr. Daley agreed with Army doctors that medical science and food were of little avail now.

Military authorities had fought since his liberation last February to save the once brawny six-footer from effects of malnutrition, tuberculosis, beri-beri and laryngitis. Then they sent Jim home Monday so he might die in his own bed.

That's the way Jim's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Newman, wanted it.

Of course, Jim wanted to be home, too. But he said right away he wasn't going to die.

"I'm going to get well," Jim repeated, adding that his odds on that are much better than given by Dr. Daley. "Mom's biscuits and my own prayers will pull me through."

Corporal Jim has been luxuriating in his mother's home cooking ever since the Army flew him home from Bruns general hospital, Santa Fe, N. M. Army doctors figured he might as well eat what he wanted.

PREMIER CURTIN FUNERAL FRIDAY

Gen. MacArthur Hurrying To Australia For Last Rites Of Leader

CANBERRA, July 5 — Gen. Douglas MacArthur was hurrying here today for the special state funeral to be held tomorrow for Australian Premier John Curtin.

Curtin died of heart disease at 4 a. m. today at Canberra lodge, his official residence. He died in his sleep.

MacArthur immediately sent the Duke of Gloucester word he would speed here by plane from the South Pacific battle areas. The Duke, in a message to Curtin's wife, called his death "a shattering blow to Australia."

(In Manila MacArthur issued the following statement: "He was one of the greatest of wartime statesmen, and the preservation of Australia from invasion will be his immortal monument. I mourn him deeply.")

After the service here, Curtin's body will be flown 2,000 miles across Australia to be buried at the little Karrakatta cemetery, at Claremont, in West Australia, from where he first went to parliament in 1928. He was 60 years old when he died.

Acting Prime Minister Francis M. Forde will continue to run the government until the labor party elects a new leader.

Curtin first suffered from heart trouble in November, 1944. He doggedly stuck at his job, while the tide of war was turning against the Japanese, until last March when he went into a hospital here. He improved and was able to leave.

SUB TRIGGER PRESUMED LOST, NAVY REVEALS

WASHINGTON, July 5 — The Navy today reported that the submarine U. S. S. Trigger is overdue from patrol operations and must be presumed lost with all its officers and crew.

The loss brings to 45 the number of American submarines sunk or missing during this war.

A submarine of the Trigger type normally carries a crew of 80 to 85 men.

The lost submersible was skippered by Cmdr. David R. Connole, Madison, Ill., who is listed as missing.

NAVY TO TAKE CHARGE OF IDLE RUBBER UNITS

President Orders Seizure After Strikers Defy War Labor Board

STRIKE ON 19 DAYS

Navy May Use Armed Force To Get Production Of Goods Started

WASHINGTON, July 5—President Truman today ordered the Navy to seize the Goodyear Tire & Rubber plants at Akron, O., scene of a persistent, 19-day strike.

Mr. Truman acted after the union, the United Rubber Workers of America (CIO), refused to abide by repeated War Labor Board orders for the 16,700 strikers to return to work. The strike began June 16.

Mr. Truman acted on the recommendation of Economic Stabilization Director William H. Davis. Davis said the Goodyear production was "urgently needed by our military forces."

The plants were producing heavy-duty tires, aircraft tires, refueling hose and other rubber products for war use.

The President's seizure order authorized the Navy to take any action necessary—including use of armed forces—to provide protection for the plants and all persons employed in them or seeking employment, and their families and homes.

Navy control will end within 60 days after the secretary of Navy determines that the productive efficiency of the plants has been restored to a level prevailing prior to the strike.

According to Davis, union representatives said that the underlying cause of the work stoppage was "an accumulation of grievances," but the local declined to abide by WLB requests that these grievances be settled through normal government channels.

The international union has described the strike as unauthorized and as in violation of the union's no-strike pledge.

The Army reported that the plants involved produce more than one-third of the airplane tires made in this country, as well as substantial numbers of other tires.

Davis said the Army regarded the strike as so serious that it "threatens to upset operational plans in the Pacific."

TO RECOGNIZE WARSAW

WASHINGTON, July 5—The United States will break off relations with the Polish government-in-exile late today or tonight and formally recognize the new-born Polish government of national unity at Warsaw, it was learned.

Gen. Spaatz Will Direct Air War Against Japs

WASHINGTON, July 5—Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, who commanded the U. S. air forces in the strategic warfare which destroyed German resources from the air, will direct the strategic air attack on Japan, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson announced today.

Spaatz will command the 20th air force, whose B-29's have been battering Japan's resources for more than a year, and the Eighth air force, which is now being redeployed from Europe to the Pacific.

Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay, who has been deputy commander of the 20th air force, will serve as deputy commander of USASTAF under Spaatz' overall command.

Gen. Henry H. Arnold has held command of the 20th heretofore in addition to commanding the entire U. S. Army air forces.

Lt. Gen. James A. Doolittle also has been deputy commander of the 20th air force, will serve as deputy commander of USASTAF under Spaatz' overall command.

Americans Better Fed Than Others

U. S. Citizens Housed And Clothed Better, Produced Half Of Munitions

WASHINGTON, July 5—America managed to keep its citizens better fed, housed and clothed than any other nation last year despite the fact that it turned out nearly half the world's munitions.

War Production Chairman J. A. Krug reported to President Truman today on what he termed "a year of brilliant achievement on the production front."

In 1944, he said, America's production machine made almost 45 per cent of the combined combat munitions of both the United Nations and the Axis.

Total world arms output in 1944 was valued at $101,500,000,000. Krug reported, with the U. S. share put at $43,500,000,000. The United Nations, he added, outproduced the Axis three to one.

Overall U. S. production for 1944 reached $199,000,000,000.

Total war production, including construction and other items not directly of a combat nature, amounted to $61,300,000,000. Krug said that while this was less than in 1943, it should be remembered that there were far-reaching shifts in requirements, new manpower problems and "tremendous production engineering problems."

For one thing, he said, there was a smaller working force. In 1944, the armed services averaged 11,380,000 persons or 2,500,000 more than in 1943, while the civilian labor force dropped almost 1,000,000.

CITY, COMPANY ASK NEW TRIAL

Both Sides File Motions For Rehearing Of Water Appropriation Suit

Judge Earl D. Parker had under consideration Thursday motions for new trials by both the City of Circleville and the Ohio Water Service Company in the appropriation suit brought by the city against the water company.

Motions were filed shortly before the deadline for the filing, Tuesday evening by Carl Leist and Ralph W. Dunbar, attorneys for the Ohio Water Service company and Joseph W. Adkins and Tom A. Renick, who represented the city at the trial.

The jury which considered the case rendered a decision after four hours of deliberation of evidence presented to them over a period of two weeks duration, June 30. In their decision they stated that the holdings of the water company were worth $420,000.

The water company which was the first to file for a new trial did so they said because substantial rights of the Ohio Water Service Company were materially and adversely affected by several errors of law which occurred at the time of the trial. Errors cited were the improper admission of evidence; the rejection of proper evidence; rulings on motions during the trial; rejection of proffered and requested special instructions to the jury and improperly and incompletely instructing the jury in the general charge.

Attorneys for the city ask that the court set aside and vacate the verdict of the jury and that a new trial be granted for the following causes which materially affect the substantial rights of the city; the court refused to admit evidence offered by the city; the court overruled the objections of the city admitted evidence for the Ohio Water Service company; court abused discretion in permitting the Ohio Water Service company to open the case in chief on numerous occasions after the Ohio Water Service company had rested the case; the verdict of the jury was excessive and against the weight of evidence; other errors which were apparent on the face of the record; granting of the Ohio Water Service company's special instructions to which the city objected at the time and errors of law occurring in the court's general charge to the jury to which the city objected.

The Russian commandant in Berlin, Maj. Gen. Viktor Baranov, formally turned over the American zone to Gen. Omar N. Bradley at 4 p. m. yesterday, to the thunder of a 48-gun salute.

An honor guard of the U. S. second armored division and first airborne army flanked Bradley at the ceremony, and military bands played the American and Russian national anthems.

Baranov, in a short speech translated by an American officer, expressed Russia's thanks for American aid during the war and his hope for a permanent friendship between the two countries.

Bradley in reply said he hoped it never again would be necessary to conquer a nation so completely as the Allies had to conquer Germany in order to prevent the Nazis from establishing their tyranny over their neighbors.

Vanguards of the British occupation force arrived in Berlin shortly after 6 p. m., drawing faint cheers from a crowd of about 1,500 Berliners who gathered to watch their entry.

Evidence Of Hitler's Death Found

Writer Inspects Love Nest To Confirm Story Told By Fuehrer's Chauffeur

BY JACK FLEISCHER
United Press Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, July 5—Two weeks ago Hitler's chauffeur, Erich Kempka, told me how the fuhrer and Eva Braun had committed suicide in a bunker behind the reichs chancellery.

Kempka described the sofa where Eva sat, the hole in the ground where the bodies were burned, and other details such as the five jerricans used to pour gasoline on the bodies.

Today, in that bunker, I found everything just as Kempka had described it—even to the five jerricans with bullet holes in them.

The evidence was circumstantial, but overwhelming, that the suicide story was true.

(BBC Correspondent Richard Dimbleby, in a Berlin broadcast, said that doctors now called the body originally thought to be Hitler's that of a bad double of Hitler's.)

The most sensational piece of evidence were the unmistakable blood stains on the sofa where Kempka said Eva sat when she put a bullet into her heart. The stains were on the tapestried seat and back and on the wooden top piece of the right-hand sofa arm.

No stains were visible in the center or left hand portion of the sofa, where Kempka said Hitler sat when he put a shot into his head. The floor in front of the sofa, where the blood probably dripped, was covered with more than an inch of water so I could find no stains.

In the blasted garden outside, I saw a shallow, trenchlike hole about eight yards from the bunker entrance. This was the hole where Kempka said Hitler's and Eva's bodies were burned in mid-afternoon of April 30th after being saturated with five jerricans full of gasoline. To top it off, five bullet-ridden jerricans lay to one side of the bunker entrance.

No evidence of the charred remains of the bodies could be seen in the hole. However, during the nine weeks which have gone by since the burning, innumerable Russians and others have tramped through the chancellery grounds. The ground also was torn up by shells and bombs.

Two German workmen from the chancellery today confirmed that Kempka was among the last persons there at the end of April, and

U. S., BRITISH FLAGS NOW FLY OVER BERLIN

BERLIN, July 5—The Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack flew alongside the Russian hammer and sickle over Berlin today as American and British troops took over their occupation zones in the German capital.

JAPS REPORT 300 SUPERFORTS AMONG RAIDERS

Nips Fearing Trouble From North As Chinese Meet Soviet Leaders

PHILIPPINES LIBERATED

MacArthur Announces Finish Of Fighting In Islands; Task Force On Prowl

By United Press

The Japanese radio said two powerful American air fleets totaling some 300 superforts, Liberators and fighters attacked the Tokyo area, the port of Nagasaki and other targets on Honshu and Kyushu today.

The pre-invasion softening up of the Japanese homeland roared through its 30th straight day with morning and afternoon assaults paced by superforts and liberators with a strong fighter screen. Tokyo broadcasts reported.

The raiding forces were reported ranging widely over the main Japanese islands in what had become virtually a non-stop offensive by daylight.

The first enemy accounts of today's attacks said nine superforts and about 100 long range Mustang fighters hit Honshu. They concentrated on the Chiba, Ibaraki and Tokigi prefectures in the Tokyo area.

A few hours later about 290 liberators and fighters attacked objectives in Kyushu. The heaviest blow was struck at Nagasaki and nearby Omura, the Japanese said. Other targets in Miyazaki, Oita, Saga and Nagasaki prefectures were attacked.

Tokyo looked nervously to the north today as it reported an American task force ranging the coast of Sakhalin island and the Soviet government in Moscow opened talks with Chinese and Mongolian leaders.

Shikoku Bombed

The Japanese reported that American warships, on the prow in the sea of Okhotsk, had bombed Shikoku, only 55 miles south of the boundary splitting Sakhalin, owned jointly by Japan and Russia.

Thirteenth minister of the Mongolian people's republic arrived in Moscow and was given a very cordial reception by the Russians. V. M. Molotov, foreign affairs commissar, was at the airport to meet him. Chinese Premier T. V. Soong already was in the Soviet capital to plead for help from the Russians.

Blockade Still Tight

In the blockade of Japan, which again forced the Japanese to cut their food rations recently, American planes sank or damaged 32 enemy ships. The bag included two destroyers hit in a convoy attacked off the mouth of the Yangtze river.

Earlier 450 to 500 superforts loosed 3,000 tons of fire bombs on Kochi, Tokushima and Takamatsu, all on Shikoku, and the port of Himeji on Honshu. Crews said the targets were "burning like all the fires of hell had broken loose."

On Borneo Australian troops had captured most of the oil port of Balikpapan and were driving toward the Pandanari oil refinery area north of the city. One field dispatch said the captured Mangar airfield was almost ready for use.

450,000 Japs Destroyed

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced the end of the Philippines fighting with the destruction of 23 enemy divisions, or 450,000 troops. Seventeen American divisions were used in the campaign, described by MacArthur as "the greatest disaster ever sustained by Japanese arms," and presumably the bulk of them were free for new operations.

MacArthur said the Philippines would be turned into a great invasion base rivaling England in the assault on western Europe.

On the Chinese mainland, the Japanese drive north from Luchow peninsula, apparently a cover for a withdrawal from Hainan island, was halted. Chungking announced that Chinese troops had recaptured Fushien, lost two days ago to the Japanese.

Admiral Pessimistic

A surprisingly pessimistic statement was made in Tokyo by Admiral Suzu Kurihara, naval spokesman.

He urged immediate ratification of the San Francisco UNIO charter.

Both Sides File Motions For Rehearing Of Water Appropriation Suit

Judge Earl D. Parker had under consideration Thursday motions for new trials by both the City of Circleville and the Ohio Water Service Company in the appropriation suit brought by the city against the water company.

Motions were filed shortly before the deadline for the filing, Tuesday evening by Carl Leist and Ralph W. Dunbar, attorneys for the Ohio Water Service company and Joseph W. Adkins and Tom A. Rendick, who represented the city at the trial.

The jury which considered the case rendered a decision after four hours of deliberation of evidence presented to them over a period of two weeks duration, June 30. In their decision they stated that the holdings of the water company were worth $420,000.

The water company which was the first to file for a new trial did so they said because substantial rights of the Ohio Water Service Company were materially and adversely affected by several errors of law which occurred at the time of the trial. Errors cited were the improper admission of evidence; the rejection of proper evidence; rulings on motions during the trial; rejection of proffered and requested special instructions to the jury and improperly and incompletely instructing the jury in the general charge.

Attorneys for the city ask that the court set aside and vacate the verdict of the jury and that a new trial be granted for the following causes which materially affect the substantial rights of the city; the court refused to admit evidence offered by the city; the court over the objections of the city admitted evidence for the Ohio Water Service company; court abused discretion in permitting the Ohio Water Service company to open the case in chief on numerous occasions after the Ohio Water Service company had rested the case; the verdict of the jury was excessive and against the weight of evidence; other errors which were apparent on the face of the record; granting of the Ohio Water Service company's special instructions to which the city objected at the time and errors of law occurring in the court's general charge to the jury to which the city objected.

The Russian commandant in Berlin, Maj. Gen. Viktor Baranov, formally turned over the American zone to Gen. Omar N. Bradley at 4 p. m. yesterday, to the thunder of a 48-gun salute.

An honor guard of the U. S. second armored division and first airborne army flanked Bradley at the ceremony, and military bands played the American and Russian national anthems.

Baranov, in a short speech translated by an American officer, expressed Russia's thanks for American aid during the war and his hope for a permanent friendship between the two countries.

Bradley in reply said he hoped it never again would be necessary to conquer a nation so completely as the Allies had to conquer Germany in order to prevent the Nazis from establishing their tyranny over their neighbors.

Vanguards of the British occupation force arrived in Berlin shortly after 6 p. m., drawing faint cheers from a crowd of about 1,500 Berliners who gathered to watch their entry.

Evidence Of Hitler's Death Found

Writer Inspects Love Nest To Confirm Story Told By Fuehrer's Chauffeur

BY JACK FLEISCHER

United Press Staff Correspondent
BERLIN, July 5—Two weeks ago Hitler's chauffeur, Erich Kempka, told me how the fuhrer and Eva Braun had committed suicide in a bunker behind the reichs chancellery.

Kempka described the sofa where Eva sat, the hole in the ground where the bodies were burned, and other details such as the five jerricans used to pour gasoline on the bodies.

Today, in that bunker, I found everything just as Kempka had described it—even to the five jerricans with bullet holes in them.

The evidence was circumstantial, but overwhelming, that the suicide story was true.

The most sensational piece of evidence was the unmistakable blood stains on the sofa where Kempka said Eva sat when she put a bullet into her heart. The stains were on the tapestried seat and back and on the wooden top piece of the right-hand sofa arm.

No stains were visible in the center or left hand portion of the sofa, where Kempka said Hitler sat when he put a shot into his head. The floor in front of the sofa, where the blood probably dripped, was covered with more than an inch of water so I could find no stains.

In the blasted garden outside, I saw a shallow, trenchlike hole about eight yards from the bunker entrance. This was the hole where Kempka said Hitler's and Eva's bodies were burned in mid-afternoon of April 30th after being saturated with five jerricans full of gasoline. To top it off, five bullet-ridden jerricans lay to one side of the bunker entrance.

No evidence of the charred remains of the bodies could be seen in the hole. However, during the nine weeks which have gone by since the burning, innumerable Russians and others have tramped through the chancellery grounds. The ground also was torn up by shells and bombs.

Two German workmen from the chancellery today confirmed that Kempka was among the last persons there at the end of April, and (Continued on Page Two)

JAPS REPORT 300 SUPERFORTS AMONG RAIDERS

PHILIPPINES LIBERATED

MacArthur Announces Finish Of Fighting In Islands; Task Force On Prowl

By United Press

The Japanese radio said two powerful American air fleets totaling some 300 superforts, Liberators and fighters attacked the Tokyo area, the port of Nagasaki and other targets on Honshu and Kyushu today.

The pre-invasion softening up of the Japanese homeland roared through its 30th straight day with morning and afternoon assaults paced by superforts and liberators with a strong fighter screen, Tokyo broadcasts reported.

The raiding forces were reported ranging widely over the main Japanese islands in what had become virtually a non-stop offensive by daylight.

The first enemy accounts of today's attacks said nine superforts and about 100 long range Mustang fighters hit Honshu. They concentrated on the Chiba, Ibaraki and Tokigi prefectures in the Tokyo area.

A few hours later about 200 liberators and fighters attacked objectives in Kyushu. The heaviest blow was struck at Nagasaki and nearby Omura, the Japanese said. Other targets in Miyazaki, Oita, Saga and Nagasaki prefectures were attacked.

Tokyo looked nervously to the north today as it reported an American task force ranging the coast of Sakhalin island and the Soviet government in Moscow opened talks with Chinese and Mongolian leaders.

Shikoku Bombarded

The Japanese reported that American warships, on the prow in the sea of Okhotsk, had bombarded Shikoku, only 55 miles south of the boundary splitting Sakhalin, owned jointly by Japan and Russia.

Prime minister of the Mongolian people's republic arrived in Moscow and was given a very cordial reception by the Russians. V. M. Molotov, foreign affairs commissar, was at the airport to meet him. Chinese Premier T. V. Soong already was in the Soviet capital to plead for help from the Russians.

Blockade Still Tight

In the blockade of Japan, which again forced the Japanese to cut their food rations recently, American planes sank or damaged 32 enemy ships. The bag included two destroyers hit in a convoy attacked off the mouth of the Yangtze river.

Earlier 450 to 500 superforts loosed 3,000 tons of fire bombs on Kochi, Tokushima and Takamatsu, all on Shikoku, and the port of Himeji on Honshu. Crews said the targets were "burning like all the fires of hell had broken loose."

On Borneo Australian troops had captured most of the oil port of Balikpapan and were driving toward the Pandansari oil refinery area north of the city. One field dispatch said the captured Mangar airfield was almost ready for use.

450,000 Japs Destroyed

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced the end of the Philippines fighting with the destruction of 23 enemy divisions, or 450,000 troops. Seventeen American divisions were used in the campaign, described by MacArthur as "the greatest disaster ever sustained by Japanese arms," and presumably the bulk of them were free for new operations.

MacArthur said the Philippines would be turned into a great invasion base rivaling England in the assault on western Europe.

On the Chinese mainland, the Japanese drive north from Luchow peninsula, apparently a cover for a withdrawal from Hainan island, was halted. Chungking announced that Chinese troops had recaptured Fashien, lost two days ago to the Japanese.

man for imperial headquarters, who admitted Japan was in a "most unfavorable" position for what he called the "showdown battle on the home shores."

With the reported American naval exploits on Sakhalin, the Japanese now were beset by danger in both north and south. They previously had talked about coming attacks on the southern home island of Kyushu, but now American warships were ranging close to the northern island of Hokkaido.

The Tokyo reports said that only five warships took part in the bombardment of Shikoku, but that other American vessels were prowling the sea of Okhotsk. Tokyo said American submarines also had surfaced to shell and strafe Kaiyo island south of Takahagi bay, where Shikoku is located.

AIR EDUCATION MAKING GREAT STRIDES

Over 14,000 High Schools Giving Pre-Flight Courses

By PHILLIPS J. PECK
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The famous "Three R's" of education today are undergoing a face-lifting operation that will fit them for the air age ahead.

No longer can textbooks on the history of transportation end with the story of the Wright brothers' flight and a prediction of future possibilities.

The millions of war-time miles flown by the Army's Air Transport Command and the prospect of an output of 50,000 light planes annually for the first five years after the war have turned the most optimistic predictions into commonplace facts.

The old problem of subtracting apples from oranges will be supplanted in modern-day arithmetic books by one dealing with airplanes travelling at different speeds.

Educators, plane builders and government officials recognize the vital need of not discarding helterskelter the existing curricula of schools but of modernizing education to the age of flight. "Air Age Education" is the byword of today!

Work in this field was begun on a large scale by the Civil Aeronautics administration a few weeks after Pearl Harbor when aviation education was an experiment conducted by relatively few schools. In four months, more than 100,000 school officials were contacted through clinics, conferences and other methods.

Under the leadership of Bruce Uthus, CAA's director of Aviation Education, the agency sponsored the preparation of student textbooks and teacher manuals and teacher training courses in aeronautics at 170 colleges. More than 4,000 teachers enrolled.

High School Courses Common

Today more than half the nation's 28,000 high schools are giving some form of pre-flight courses such as meteorology, primary aerodynamics, physics and engineering. The CAA estimates that each year there are between 75,000 and 100,000 high school graduates who have completed one or more elementary aviation courses.

Because of the contribution to the war, major emphasis heretofore has been placed on pre-flight aeronautics and the technical phases of aviation. Now, however, Uthus and a host of other aviation leaders are aiming at a broad, coordinated program which will embrace the effects of aviation in social, economic and political fields.

"It is not necessary or desirable that the fundamental educational subjects be curtailed or substituted, rather it is desirable and essential that such subjects be brought up to date to include their relation and application to the conditions resulting from aviation and to the kind of world aviation is creating," Uthus explains.

Flying—stimulated to a high pitch by war—is expected to have a more profound effect on United States education than any technological development of the past 50 years. Aviation education means, according to Uthus and his colleagues, a reassessment of every school subject.

The familiar maps in school geographies must be implemented—the airplane has erased traditional barriers and latitude and longitude, date lines and time changes assume the importance of state and national boundaries.

History, economics, political science, sociology and civics are all "air-borne." To the study of topography and tides must be added meteorology. The language, arts, crafts and civilization of far-away places now are available for American study and intercourse. Distances and flying time between important points, great circle directions, navigation, etc., are important in math problems of today. The Air-Age Education committee of the American Association of School Administrators believes that, until air travel becomes more commonplace, schools may wish teachers and pupils to have the following experiences: visits to airports, community flights, point-to-point trips, regional explorations, American and world explorations.

"There seems to be little doubt that the world is entering one of its most exciting periods in history," the committee said. "The public has practically been promised a helicopter in every garage and a trip to Bali or the Fiji Islands once or twice a year."

"Obviously, the airplane is not simply a new mechanism of transportation. More than that, it is a new governor of human affairs."

"When the economy and society change direction or enlarge in scope, education, too, must change and enlarge, for otherwise youth will be trained in historical rather than modern ways of life."

In short, the "Three R's" are no longer earthbound; they are becoming three-dimensional.

Demand Is Great

In the summer of 1942, the Civil Aeronautics administration had to open its civilian pilot training courses to high school instructors to fill a need for teaching talent in aviation education. Today the nation's colleges are offering courses in aviation physiology, civil aviation medicine, airline administration and practices.

Aviation teaching aids, particularly at the high school level, hardly existed when America entered the war. Since then hundreds of authors have produced a vast array of aviation education books, laboratory apparatus, motion pictures and films. Teachers are beginning to look upon the teaching of aeronautics as a career.

National aviation clinics now are an established feature and the Social Science Foundation of the University of Denver will present, as a feature of the 1945 summer quarter, the first Denver Congress on Air Age Education, July 22-28. The university summed up its air clinic as follows:

"Hitherto there has been a costly lag between new inventions on the one hand and society's perception of their possibility for the enrichment of individual and social life on the other hand.

"This congress will seek to narrow the gap between technical discovery and achievement in the air and the social, cultural and educational adaptations of such improvements to the larger goals of human welfare. . . . It will also search for effective ways of educating both youth and adults alike in knowledge and appreciation of these findings."

Lafayette college is pioneering the newest approach to aviation education with a summer aviation camp at Easton, Pa. Some 50 boys, 14 to 17 years of age, are stepping into the age of flight as naturally as birds take to the air.

Introduction to Aviation

Many learn to fly. Others only ride to get "flight experience." The general purpose of the camp, however, is not to train pilots, but to introduce youth to the many aspects of aviation.

All students study aerial photography, aviation history and the civil air regulations. Advanced students use maps and charts to learn about navigation; discuss air foils, gravity, lift and drag; learn the fundamentals of aerodynamics; operate slide rules in aviation mathematical computation.

Perhaps the most significant development is yet to come. Currently in the formative stage is an Aviation Education Foundation, a non-profit corporation, whose job will be to help formulate and carry out a national program for aviation education in the schools.

National leaders of education, the aircraft and air transportation industry are engaged in setting up the foundation. Its program will include preparation of teaching material and training courses, encouragement of school and public acceptance of aviation education; information programs to keep schools continuously abreast of developments in aeronautics and air transportation.

American Airlines already has established air-age education research for "the advancement of understanding and the diffusion of knowledge pertaining to air transportation."

In Washington, RFC officials are preparing to distribute a catalog listing surplus warplanes and other aviation equipment which an estimated 30,000 schools and colleges will be eligible to purchase for non-flight, educational purposes.

Typical charges to be made are: twin-engine fighters, $150; link trainers, $350; dive bombers, $100; propellers of all kinds, $15; carburetor, $3; fuselage, $20 to $200.

hood that the Laborite, liberal, commonwealth and communist candidates, plus a sprinkling of anti-Churchill independents, would come up with a majority in the house, making it very nearly impossible for the Churchill government to continue.

To control commons, the conservatives had to win at least 345 seats, which would give them a working majority of about 50 votes over the combined opposition.

One of the biggest uncertainties was the trend of the 7,000,000 young voters who had never voted before. Another was the extent to which the women voters, on whom the conservatives rely heavily, had been "politicalized" by their experiences in war factories.

The polls opened at 7 a. m. in some London districts, and at 8 o'clock elsewhere throughout the country, with closing time at 9 p. m.

Service men stationed abroad began voting last Tuesday, continuing until 9 o'clock tonight.

The ballots will be counted on July 26, and the final results are expected to be known by 4 p. m. of that day.

Hitler's two-story underground bunker was a shambles inside, but its reinforced concrete walls and roof were intact. Going downstairs by candlelight, I found Hitler's suite with the help of a diagram Kempka had given me.

The fuhrer's sitting room was about 12 feet long and eight feet wide. Two small armchairs were piled on the suicide sofa. Opposite was a work desk, also covered with chairs and other odds and ends.

A door off to the right led to Hitler's cubby-hole bedroom. There was a fire-blackened big steel safe, which apparently the Russians had cracked open.

To the left from the sitting room was a bathroom, which led to Eva's bedroom. Like all the other rooms everything was a horrible mess. But the furniture obviously was the kind which belongs in a woman's boudoir. The dresser was littered with feminine articles, including a bottle of perfume.

Off the reception room of the apartment was the small conference room, where Hitler and his staff held daily meetings. The room was partly burned out, but a bench remained around two sides of the wall. I found typed copies of a stenographic report of one of the last conferences, but the sheet was torn into such small bits it would take days to fit together. There also were a few typewritten sheets of Allied radio news reports.

Americans Better Fed Than Others.

"The important and astounding fact," Krug said, "is that in 1944, the year in which the crescendo of war was mounting to a thunderous climax, the American consumer and his family remained by far the best-fed, best-housed and best-clothed civilians in the world."

"While all battlefronts were ablaze . . . the American consumer was furnished with more goods and services than in any year since 1941."

The consumer spent more and got less for his money, however. The report showed that consumers spent $7,000,000,000 more for goods and services last year than in 1943, but in terms of 1943 prices, they did not get that much more in clothing or household equipment.

Here are some of the 1944 achievements Krug listed:

A total of 96,359 planes including 16,048 heavy bombers; 30,889 ships; 17,565 tanks; 595,330 army trucks; 3,284 heavy field guns and howitzers and 7,454 light ones; 152,000 army aircraft rocket launchers, 215,177 bazookas and 1,416,774 tons of ground artillery ammunition.

By 1944, synthetic rubber production had risen to 753,000 long tons compared to 8,000 in 1941; aluminum production was trebled between January, 1942, and October, 1944; magnesium production was 50 times 1939 output; steel production was up 33 1/3 per cent over 1940; penicillin production was 80 times over that of 1943; aviation gasoline production doubled in 1944 as compared to 1943.

16 OHIOANS DIE VIOLENTLY OVER JULY 4 HOLIDAY

By United Press

At least sixteen persons died violently in Ohio over the Independence day holiday. The warm weather and sunny skies which sent thousands to rivers and beaches caused drownings to lead the list of accidental deaths.

A breakdown of holiday fatalities showed at least seven drownings, two burned to death, two killed in a grade crossing accident, two killed in automobile accidents, one shot to death, one killed in a fall, and one bludgeoned.

Work in this field was begun on a large scale by the Civil Aeronautics administration a few weeks after Pearl Harbor when aviation education was an experiment conducted by relatively few schools. In four months, more than 100,000 school officials were contacted through clinics, conferences and other methods.

Under the leadership of Bruce Uthas, CAA's director of Aviation Education, the agency sponsored the preparation of student textbooks and teacher manuals and teacher training courses in aeronautics at 170 colleges. More than 4,000 teachers enrolled.

High School Courses Common

Today more than half the nation's 28,000 high schools are giving some form of pre-flight courses such as meteorology, primary aerodynamics, physics and engineering. The CAA estimates that each year there are between 75,000 and 100,000 high school graduates who have completed one or more elementary aviation courses.

Because of the contribution to the war, major emphasis heretofore has been placed on pre-flight aeronautics and the technical phases of aviation. Now, however, Uthas and a host of other aviation leaders are aiming at a broad, coordinated program which will embrace the effects of aviation in social, economic and political fields.

"It is not necessary or desirable that the fundamental educational subjects be curtailed or substituted, rather it is desirable and essential that such subjects be brought up to date to include their relation and application to the conditions resulting from aviation and to the kind of world aviation is creating," Uthas explains.

Flying—stimulated to a high pitch by war—is expected to have a more profound effect on United States education than any technological development of the past 50 years. Aviation education means, according to Uthas and his colleagues, a reassessment of every school subject.

The familiar maps in school geographies must be implemented—the airplane has erased traditional barriers and latitude and longitude, date lines and time changes assume the importance of state and national boundaries.

History, economics, political science, sociology and civics are all "air-borne." To the study of topography and tides must be added meteorology. The language, arts, crafts and civilization of far-away places now are available for American study and intercourse. Distances and flying time between important points, great circle directions, navigation, etc., are important in math problems of today.

The Air-Age Education committee of the American Association of School Administrators believes that, until air travel becomes more commonplace, schools may wish teachers and pupils to have the following experiences: visits to airports, community flights, point-to-point trips, regional explorations, American and world explorations.

"There seems to be little doubt that the world is entering one of its most exciting periods in history," the committee said. "The public has practically been promised a helicopter in every garage and a trip to Bali or the Fiji Islands once or twice a year."

"Obviously, the airplane is not simply a new mechanism of transportation. More than that, it is a new governor of human affairs."

"When the economy and society change direction or enlarge in scope, education, too, must change and enlarge, for otherwise youth will be trained in historical rather than modern ways of life."

In short, the "Three R's" are no longer earthbound; they are becoming three-dimensional.

Demand Is Great

In the summer of 1942, the Civil Aeronautics administration had to open its civilian pilot training courses to high school instructors to fill a need for teaching talent in aviation education. Today the nation's colleges are offering courses in aviation physiology, civil aviation medicine, airline administration and practices.

Aviation teaching aids, particularly at the high school level, hardly existed when America entered the war. Since then hundreds of authors have produced a vast array of aviation education books, laboratory apparatus, motion pictures and films. Teachers are beginning to look upon the teaching of aeronautics as a career.

National aviation clinics now are an established feature and the Social Science Foundation of the University of Denver will present, as a feature of the 1945 summer quarter, the first Denver Congress on Air Age Education, July 22-28. The university summed up its air clinic as follows:

"Hitherto there has been a costly lag between new inventions on the one hand and society's perception of their possibility for the enrichment of individual and social life on the other hand. This congress will seek to narrow the gap between technical discovery and achievement in the air and the social, cultural and educational adaptations of such improvements to the larger goals of human welfare. . . . It will also search for effective ways of educating both youth and adults alike in knowledge and appreciation of these findings."

Lafayette college is pioneering the newest approach to aviation education with a summer aviation camp at Easton, Pa. Some 50 boys, 14 to 17 years of age, are stepping into the age of flight as naturally as birds take to the air.

Introduction to Aviation

Many learn to fly. Others only ride to get "flight experience." The general purpose of the camp, however, is not to train pilots, but to introduce youth to the many aspects of aviation.

All students study aerial photography, aviation history and the civil air regulations. Advanced students use maps and charts to learn about navigation; discuss air foils, gravity, lift and drag; learn the fundamentals of aerodynamics; operate slide rules in aviation mathematical computation.

Perhaps the most significant development is yet to come. Currently in the formative stage is an Aviation Education Foundation, a non-profit corporation, whose job will be to help formulate and carry out a national program for aviation education in the schools.

National leaders of education, the aircraft and air transportation industry are engaged in setting up the foundation. Its program will include preparation of teaching material and training courses, encouragement of school and public acceptance of aviation education; information programs to keep schools continuously abreast of developments in aeronautics and air transportation.

American Airlines already has established air-age education research for "the advancement of understanding and the diffusion of knowledge pertaining to air transportation."

In Washington, RFC officials are preparing to distribute a catalog listing surplus warplanes and other aviation equipment which an estimated 30,000 schools and colleges will be eligible to purchase for non-flight, educational purposes.

Typical charges to be made are: twin-engine fighters, $150; link trainers, $250; dive bombers, $100; propellers of all kinds, $15; carburetor, $3; fuselage, $20 to $200.

hood that the Laborite, liberal, commonwealth and communist candidates, plus a sprinkling of anti-Churchill independents, would come up with a majority in the house, making it very nearly impossible for the Churchill government to continue.

To control commons, the conservatives had to win at least 345 seats, which would give them a working majority of about 50 votes over the combined opposition.

One of the biggest uncertainties was the trend of the 7,000,000 young voters who had never voted before. Another was the extent to which the women voters, on whom the conservatives rely heavily, had been "politicalized" by their experiences in war factories.

The polls opened at 7 a. m. in some London districts, and at 8 o'clock elsewhere throughout the country, with closing time at 9 p. m.

Service men stationed abroad began voting last Tuesday, continuing until 9 o'clock tonight.

The ballots will be counted on July 26, and the final results are expected to be known by 4 p. m. of that day.

Deaths and Funerals

JOHN LEROY KUHN

John Leroy Kuhn, 2 months old son of Pfc. and Mrs. John Herman Kuhn (Elsie Mae Teets) died at 2 a. m. Thursday morning. He was an only child.

Surviving are the father, who is stationed at Camp Atterbury, Ind., the mother, Mrs. Mable Teets, the maternal grandmother and Pearly Kuhn, paternal grandfather.

Funeral will be Friday, 2:30 p. m. at the Pilgrim Holiness church on Haywood avenue. The Rev. Alonzo Hill will officiate. Burial will be in Forest cemetery by Defenbacher funeral home.

Friends may call at the residence, 750 North Scioto, after 10:30 Friday morning.

MRS. MABEL MCCAIN

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at the Hitler-Ludwig cemetery chapel for Mrs. Mabel Shoemaker McCain, former Circleville resident and widow of Frank McCain, who died Tuesday at her home, 350 Mithoff street, Columbus.

Surviving are three sisters, Mrs. Arthur Miller, Chillicothe; Mrs. Myrtle Wilkinson, Columbus and Mrs. Thompson Ross, Laurelsville and a brother, Paul Shoemaker, Columbus.

Deceased was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Rainbow veterans auxiliaries who will hold services at the Cook and Son funeral home, Columbus, at 8 p. m. Thursday.

HOME IS SOMETHING LIKE THIS

AS THE WAR MOVES CLOSER to the Jap homeland, Pacific isles that once bore the scars of war begin to take on the quieter aspects of civilization. one said, "he should know the true story."

Hitler's two-story underground bunker was a shambles inside, but its reinforced concrete walls and roof were intact. Going downstairs by candlelight, I found Hitler's suite with the help of a diagram Kempka had given me.

The fuhrer's sitting room was about 12 feet long and eight feet wide. Two small armchairs were piled on the suicide sofa. Opposite was a work desk, also covered with chairs and other odds and ends.

A door off to the right led to Hitler's cubby-hole bedroom. There was a fire-blackened big steel safe, which apparently the Russians had cracked open.

To the left from the sitting room was a bathroom, which led to Eva's bedroom. Like all the other rooms everything was a horrible mess. But the furniture obviously was the kind which belongs in a woman's boudoir. The dresser was littered with feminine articles, including a bottle of perfume.

Off the reception room of the apartment was the small conference room, where Hitler and his staff held daily meetings. The room was partly burned out, but a bench remained around two sides of the wall. I found typed copies of a stenographic report of one of the last conferences, but the sheet was torn into such small bits it would take days to fit together. There also were a few typewritten sheets of Allied radio news reports.

"The important and astounding fact," Krug said, "is that in 1944, the year in which the crescendo of war was mounting to a thunderous climax, the American consumer and his family remained by far the best-fed, best-housed and best-clothed civilians in the world."

"While all battlefronts were ablaze . . . the American consumer was furnished with more goods and services than in any year since 1914."

The consumer spent more and got less for his money, however. The report showed that consumers spent $7,000,000,000 more for goods and services last year than in 1943, but in terms of 1943 prices, they did not get that much more in clothing or household equipment.

Here are some of the 1944 achievements Krug listed:

A total of 96,359 planes including 16,048 heavy bombers; 30,889 ships; 17,565 tanks; 595,330 army trucks; 3,284 heavy field guns and howitzers and 7,454 light ones; 152,000 army aircraft rocket launchers, 215,177 bazookas and 1,416,774 tons of ground artillery ammunition.

By 1944, synthetic rubber production had risen to 753,000 long tons compared to 8,000 in 1941; aluminum production was trebled between January, 1942, and October, 1944; magnesium production was 50 times 1939 output; steel production was up 33 1/3 per cent over 1940; penicillin production was 80 times over that of 1943; aviation gasoline production doubled in 1944 as compared to 1943.

16 OHIOANS DIE VIOLENTLY OVER JULY 4 HOLIDAY

By United Press

At least sixteen persons died violently in Ohio over the Independence day holiday. The warm weather and sunny skies which sent thousands to rivers and beaches caused drownings to lead the list of accidental deaths.

A breakdown of holiday fatalities showed at least seven drownings, two burned to death, two killed in a grade crossing accident, two killed in automobile accidents, one shot to death, one killed in a fall, and one bludgeoned.

TRANS-ATLANTIC ROUTES GRANTED TWO AIR LINES

WASHINGTON, July 5—The civil aeronautics board today authorized Pan American Airways, American Export Airways, and Transcontinental & Western air, to fly transatlantic routes to Europe.

The board also issued a decision approving the acquisition of American export airlines by American airlines.

The decisions thus would put two domestic air lines—TWA and America (through acquisition of American Export)—into the international aviation business along with Pan-American. Hitherto only Pan-American and American Export have operated commercial service abroad.

The allocation of routes on the important Trans-Atlantic service to Europe was approved by President Truman. He did not wait for the final outcome of a fight in the senate over proposals to change the law regulating air routes.

DIVORCE ACTION FILED

A suit filed in common pleas court Tuesday states that Plummer Crago asks the court to grant him a divorce from Marjorie B. Crago on the grounds of cruelty. He asks for divorce and prays the court if it decides that Marjorie Crago be entitled to alimony to grant her the household goods which are located in the house they maintained on West High street and no other alimony. He also asks for a court order restraining her from molesting him in his work or at any other time. They were married December 4, 1934, in Circleville.

DIVORCE SUIT FILED

Gladys Louise Cox filed suit for divorce from Kenneth F. Cox, in common pleas court Tuesday charging extreme cruelty. The parties, who reside on West Union street, were married June 28, 1940 in Ashland, Ky., and are the parents of a 3-year-old daughter, Kaye Esther Cox. She claims that she is without funds for the prosecution of the case and prays the court to grant her temporary alimony, funds for the support of herself and minor child and sufficient funds to defend herself in the divorce case.

DIVORCE ACTION FILED

A suit filed in common pleas court Tuesday states that Plummer Crago asks the court to grant him a divorce from Marjorie B. Crago on the grounds of cruelty. He asks for divorce and prays the court if it decides that Marjorie Crago be entitled to alimony to grant her the household goods which are located in the house they maintained on West High street and no other alimony. He also asks for a court order restraining her from molesting him in his work or at any other time. They were married December 4, 1934, in Circleville.

DIVORCE SUIT FILED

Gladys Louise Cox filed suit for divorce from Kenneth F. Cox, in common pleas court Tuesday charging extreme cruelty. The parties, who reside on West Union street, were married June 28, 1940 in Ashland, Ky., and are the parents of a 3-year-old daughter, Kaye Esther Cox. She claims that she is without funds for the prosecution of the case and prays the court to grant her temporary alimony, funds for the support of herself and minor child and sufficient funds to defend herself in the divorce case.

SENATORS SHOW SURPRISING WIN STREAK ON ROAD

Reds And Indians Divide
Holiday Double Bills;
Cubs Gain On Bums

NEW YORK, July 5—Given a diet of daylight games in a smaller park than Griffith stadium, the Washington Senators indicated today that they might provide the surprise of the year by winning the American League pennant.

The sudden rise of the Senators to a contending spot in third place, just four-and-a-half games behind the Tigers, needs a little explanation. It appears to be highly significant because:

1. The team has won 10 out of 14 games on the road, where all but two were played in daylight, for the best traveling mark of any major league team this season. At home all but Sunday and holiday games are at night.

2. Away from the distant fences of Griffith stadium, the biggest park in the majors, they have hit 11 homers, eight on the current trip, whereas not one homer has been hit at home by a Senator player all year.

The team showed its class on the road by winning a holiday double header from the White Sox at Chicago, 5 to 4, in 12 innings, and 11 to 2. The double wins made it three in a row over the Sox whereas the Yankees, who preceded the Nats there, dropped four out of five.

Third baseman Harland Clift, who has hit eight of Washington's 11 homers, got three of them yesterday.

Two ex-service men who are pacing the American League pitchers each won a game at Detroit. Dave Ferriss, Red Sox rookie, won the opener, 4 to 3, for his 13th win as did Eddie Mayo. Paul (Dizzy) Trout was the loser of his ninth game. Alton Benton outpitched Clem Hausmann in the nightcap to give the Tigers an even break, 5 to 2, winning his sixth game and the first since breaking his leg, May 24.

The Yankees and Indians divided at Cleveland. Hank Borowy, New York ace, suffered his second defeat in a row as the Indians won the opener, 4 to 2, while Steve Gromek yielded eight scattered hits for his ninth win. The Indians tied a major league record by having no assists. In the second game Al Gettel outpitched Allie Reynolds, getting the victory in the ninth when the Yankees scored the winning run on a long fly.

The Athletics ended a 14-game losing streak at St. Louis, winning the opener, 3 to 2, but Pete Gray, one-armed outfielder gave the Browns an even break by singling home two runs in the ninth off ace Philadelphia pitcher, Russ Christopher, to take the second game, 6 to 5.

The Cubs continued their brilliant play at Boston, moving to within three and a half games of the leading Dodgers by winning two from the Braves, 5 to 3 and 7 to 6. Paul Derringer's relief pitching saved the first game when he stopped a two-run Boston rally in the eighth with the bases loaded. Homers by Andy Pafko and Bill Nicholson gave the Cubs the second victory as Derringer again came in to do a fine relief job. Pafko's homer scored three runs in the eighth and Nicholson scored the clincher in the ninth. Tommy Holmes hit safely for the Braves in both games to run his string to 31 games.

The Cards, led by little Augie Bergamo, made eight hits including a triple and two runs and drove in nine runs, beat the Giants twice at New York, 8 to 4 and 19 to 2. Ray Sanders and Elvin (Buster) Adams also hit homers for the Cards as Charley Barrett and Eldred Byerly chalked up easy victories. The Cards made 16 hits in the opener and 20 in the nightcap.

The Dodgers lost ground with a split against the Reds, who won the opener, 4 to 3, as Al Libke accounted for all the runs with two doubles and two singles. Brooklyn took the second, 5 to 3, as Hal Gregg scattered 11 hits for his 10th victory. Bucky Walters won the opener for the Reds.

The Pirates, irked at losing the opener to the Phils, 7 to 6, on an error, came back with a 15-hit attack to win the second, 13 to 0. The Phils put over the winning run on a wild throw by Frankie Gustine in the eighth of the opener. Max Butcher pitched a six-hit shutout in the second in which Jim Russell paced the batting with a homer and double.

Circleville Marksmen Win
Inter-City Match From
Chillicothe Shooters

Jim Stout shot within one point of a perfect score and paced Circleville rifleman to an easy victory over Chillicothe in an inter-city match staged at Mead park, Chillicothe, Wednesday. The shoot was over the Dewar course of 50 and 100 yards. Stout's score of 399 out of a possible 400 was the highest ever registered by a local marksman in competition, and the four-man team score of 1,587 also was the highest yet made by Circleville.

Chillicothe is in first place in the South Central Ohio Rifle league with Circleville a close second. Columbus, Zanesville and Marietta trail. Because of the tightness of the race for first position in the league Chillicothe challenged the local to a Fourth of July match and ended on the short end of a 1,587 to 1,562 count.

Circleville rifleman's next appearance will be in a league match at Zanesville July 15 with six teams competing.

NEW YORK, July 5—Given a diet of daylight games in a smaller park than Griffith stadium, the Washington Senators indicated today that they might provide the surprise of the year by winning the American League pennant.

The sudden rise of the Senators to a contending spot in third place, just four-and-a-half games behind the Tigers, needs a little explanation. It appears to be highly significant because:

1. The team has won 10 out of 14 games on the road, where all but two were played in daylight, for the best traveling mark of any major league team this season. At home all but Sunday and holiday games are at night.

2. Away from the distant fences of Griffith stadium, the biggest park in the majors, they have hit 11 homers, eight on the current trip, whereas not one homer has been hit at home by a Senator player all year.

The team showed its class on the road by winning a holiday double header from the White Sox at Chicago, 5 to 4, in 12 innings, and 11 to 2. The double wins made it three in a row over the Sox whereas the Yankees, who preceded the Nats there, dropped four out of five.

Third baseman Harland Clift, who has hit eight of Washington's 11 homers, got three of them yesterday.

Two ex-service men who are pacing the American League pitchers each won a game at Detroit. Dave Ferriss, Red Sox rookie, won the opener, 4 to 3, for his 13th win as did Eddie Mayo. Paul (Dizzy) Trout was the loser of his ninth game. Alton Benton outpitched Clem Hausmann in the nightcap to give the Tigers an even break, 5 to 2, winning his sixth game and the first since breaking his leg, May 24.

The Yankees and Indians divided at Cleveland. Hank Borowy, New York ace, suffered his second defeat in a row as the Indians won the opener, 4 to 2, while Steve Gromek yielded eight scattered hits for his ninth win. The Indians tied a major league record by having no assists. In the second game Al Gettel outpitched Allie Reynolds, getting the victory in the ninth when the Yankees scored the winning run on a long fly.

The Athletics ended a 14-game losing streak at St. Louis, winning the opener, 3 to 2, but Pete Gray, one-armed outfielder gave the Browns an even break by singling home two runs in the ninth off ace Philadelphia pitcher, Russ Christopher, to take the second game, 6 to 5.

The Cubs continued their brilliant play at Boston, moving to within three and a half games of the leading Dodgers by winning two from the Braves, 5 to 3 and 7

to 6. Paul Derringer's relief pitching saved the first game when he stopped a two-run Boston rally in the eighth with the bases loaded. Homers by Andy Pafko and Bill Nicholson gave the Cubs the second victory as Derringer again came in to do a fine relief job. Pafko's homer scored three runs in the eighth and Nicholson scored the clincher in the ninth. Tommy Holmes hit safely for the Braves in both games to run his string to 31 games.

The Cards, led by little Augie Bergamo, made eight hits including a triple and two runs and drove in nine runs, beat the Giants twice at New York, 8 to 4 and 19 to 2. Ray Sanders and Elvin (Buster) Adams also hit homers for the Cards as Charley Barrett and Eldred Byerly chalked up easy victories. The Cards made 16 hits in the opener and 20 in the nightcap.

The Dodgers lost ground with a split against the Reds, who won the opener, 4 to 3, as Al Libke accounted for all the runs with two doubles and two singles. Brooklyn took the second, 5 to 3, as Hal Gregg scattered 11 hits for his 10th victory. Bucky Walters won the opener for the Reds.

The Pirates, irked at losing the opener to the Phils, 7 to 6, on an error, came back with a 15-hit attack to win the second, 13 to 0. The Phils put over the winning run on a wild throw by Frankie Gustine in the eighth of the opener. Max Butcher pitched a six-hit shutout in the second in which Jim Russell paced the batting with a homer and double.

STOUT POSTS HIGH 399 SCORE

Circleville Marksmen Win
Inter-City Match From
Chillicothe Shooters

Jim Stout shot within one point of a perfect score and paced Circleville riflemen to an easy victory over Chillicothe in an inter-city match staged at Mead park, Chillicothe, Wednesday. The shoot was over the Dewar course of 50 and 100 yards. Stout's score of 399 out of a possible 400 was the highest ever registered by a local marksman in competition, and the four-man team score of 1,587 also was the highest yet made by Circleville.

Chillicothe is in first place in the South Central Ohio Rifle league with Circleville a close second. Columbus, Zanesville and Marietta trail. Because of the tightness of the race for first position in the league Chillicothe challenged the local to a Fourth of July match and ended on the short end of a 1,587 to 1,562 count.

Circleville riflemen's next appearance will be in a league match at Zanesville July 15 with six teams competing.

Scores in the Fourth of July match:

Ball Games Presented

A large crowd participated in the 15th annual Fourth of July celebration Wednesday at Ashville.

The fact that many war plants were working on the holiday and farmers were busy in wheat fields cut the attendance some, but sponsors of the affair were pleased with the attendance.

The program opened with a parade at 11 a. m. In the afternoon two ball games were played, Ashville K of P winning from Canal Winchester, 14-3 and Circleville All Stars defeating Blue Ribbon 7-0.

In the evening dancing was the feature attraction.

About 400 pounds of hamburger and 1,200 pounds of fish were sold at the food stand. Everything was sold out.

Rides and concessions provided entertainment between the featured attractions.

BYRNES TAKING OATH AS SECRETARY OF STATE

HOLDING A BIBLE in his hands, former War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes is sworn in as Secretary of State at the White House. In the group (l. to r.) are: Justice Richard S. Whaley, who administered the oath, Mrs. Byrnes, Byrnes, and President Truman. Looking over Mrs. Byrnes' shoulder is former State Secretary Stettinius. Behind Byrnes is Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. Standing beside the Chief Executive is Postmaster General Robert F. Hannegan, who was sworn in three days before.

'46 FORD ROLLS OFF ASSEMBLY LINE

WITH MOTOR COMPANY OFFICIALS as passengers, Henry Ford, 2nd, drives the first new 1946 Ford automobile off the assembly line at Detroit, Mich. The new car is not a "stop gap," company officials pointed out, but the result of four years of research. If you're non-priority, you'll have to wait a year before you can buy one. The new car is said to have many improvements over the pre-war model. (International)

CHEAP AT THE PRICE

THE Office of War Information, which asked for an appropriation of $42,000-000 for the next fiscal year, came through a House battle with only $18,000,000. The Senate has now restored nearly all of the House cut, on grounds which were summed up by Senator Ball of Minnesota.

To cut the duties of OWI, he said, would be "disastrous and may result in the loss of many American lives.

"It seems folly that after the huge expenditures for war in Europe, we should refuse our government the means of putting over a little doctrine of democracy. It is the cheapest insurance we can buy."

Opposition to the appropriation seems to have been based to a large extent upon the grounds that expenditure cuts had to begin some time and that the Army could do what propaganda work had to be done in occupied territory. But the Army itself did not agree with this, for statements from both General Marshall and General Eisenhower requested that the work of the OWI be carried on.

Certainly General Eisenhower, whose job it will be to deal with problems of occupation, should be able to judge the value of the work this agency has done. And anything which can save American lives is worth support.

PRESS-AGENTED STORMS

THE doings of the weather are not permitted to enjoy much privacy under modern scientific conditions. Until recent times, a storm could steal up on a section of the country and do its worst without more warning than that given by a view of the horizon.

Now a storm is press-agented all the way from Florida to the Carolinas. Recently a hurricane was watched by air and sea
as it gathered force off the Florida coast, veered off and headed north, then turned with renewed violence towards Cape Hatteras.

These storm warnings permit ships to get into safe anchorage, and allow time to take precautions for the protection of life and property on shore. Hurricanes are still highly destructive, but their damage has been substantially mitigated.

It appears after all that humans are able to "do something about the weather,"
at least in its more violent manifestations.

Boys stopping over in this country between Germany and Japan are likely to be just a mite impatient with the lads who quit war production jobs because they don't offer a permanent future.

Inside WASHINGTON

Washington Gay Society Life | Duke and Duchess of Windsor
Has Purposeful Friendliness | Hope to Make Home in France

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Heaven knows there are enough books about Washington in existence—guide books, gossip volumes and historical tomes.

But the really useful book about Washington is yet to be written.
Perhaps the one I have in mind should be done by an old-timer with a psychological turn of mind.

It should be something on the order of "How to Live Alone and Like It." Its title might be "How to Live in Washington and Keep Your Spirit High."
Washington is a cruel place. You must take it with your tongue in your cheek. You must keep constant watch that your sensitive skin does not toughen into a thick hide.

To a newcomer the pin pricks have the strength of stiletto thrusts. They are unexpected and very painful. The newcomer is likely to accept some excited party-giving as a sign of sincere friendliness.

Of course there is a kind of friendliness in the parrying of the town. But it is a purposeful friendliness. A hectic sort of keeping up with the crowd. Of staying on view where important people meet.

Some fine, unaffected citizenry have come to town with the Truman administration. I hate to see them "learn to be Washingtonians. We are a rather overly smooth crowd here. And not too typical of America.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVEN
(Subbing for Mallon)

NEW YORK, July 5—It's my guess that Dave Elman just got fed up with radio programs giving things away what's-your-name-where-do-you-live-right-here's-your-$50-next-contestant, etc.

Anyway the originator of radio's famed "Hobby Lobby" program has come up with a new one after much soul-searching and he's making people pay, but good, for the privilege of participating.

"Dave Elman's Auction Gallery" is the name of the new show, heard Tuesday nights, and it's exactly that—an auction—with no junk allowed.

For example, got $17,000 you're not using? That's the price brought by one of three original copies of Lincoln's emancipation proclamation which has sold on the show. This is the highest bid received for anything so far. But it's nothing for items to go for several hundred or a few thousand dollars. And bargains at that.

"Abraham Lincoln's breakfast table brought only $1,200," Elman explained.
"It should have brought $5,000."

You don't visit a broadcast of "Auction Gallery" unless your intentions are honorable and your checking account healthy. The studio audience is gathered by invitation only and is composed of well-known collectors and habitués of auction galleries.

"They know value and won't let me down," Elman said.

Those in the studio have one minute in which to get in their bids after an item is announced. When the highest studio bid gets under the wire the radio audience is invited to submit its bids. Two weeks are allowed for these bids to come in by mail or wire. If none of the outside bids are better the high studio bidder gets the item.

Elman has seven paid assistants aiding him in tracking down worth-while items and he also gets the free-will services of a lot of experts interested in the show who know where and how certain things can be secured.

Other items that have been auctioned off so far include Adolf Hitler's dice, brought back from Berchtesgaden by a war correspondent; a dagger that once belonged to Rudolph Valentino, letters of famous people, a Civil War ventriloquist's dummy (not Charlie McCarthy), and an alarm clock which belonged to the late grand duke Paul of Russia. This last number brought $3,000 from a member of the studio audience. It not only strikes the hour but plays a military march 24 times a day.

Of course, it would be expecting too much for Elman to break completely with the times and give away absolutely nothing. So on each program there is a gag item. For example, the successful bidder for a powder horn received a whole steer through the courtesy of a packing company; the young married couple that made the highest bid for a glass of water from the river Jordan got an order for one baby carriage redeemable any time within five years; a woman who bid $20 for a canoe paddle found there was a canoe up in Breton Woods, N. H., that went with it and received a week's expenses-paid vacation for two so she could use the paddle.

The Summer let-down took added toll of the Broadway play list last week end.
"The Hasty Heart," John Patrick's play about wounded men in an Asiatic hospital, quit after 204 performances. It will tour next Fall as one of the Theater Guild's subscription offerings, starting Sept. 21 in Bridgeport, Conn.

● SAW SOME INDICATION in the papers recently that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are planning to return to England. This, so some of their close friends tell me, is not true. The Windsors really want to go to France as soon as the war is comfortably over on the continent. An estate in the Riviera manner is their present ambition.

● I'D LIKE TO SAY SOMETHING about the new look of the White House (second floor) . . . that green sofa that used to be cat-a-corner in the Monroe room has its back to the door now. That green sofa was the sofa on which Mrs. Roosevelt used to sit, come press conference days. First there would be Mrs. Roosevelt, feet tucked under a bit—it is a low sofa. Next, Confidential Secretary Malvina Thompson, note book in hand and pencil flying. And next,
Mrs. Helm, social secretary, note book more calmly in hand.

As I was saying, the faithful sofa has its back to the door now.
The room looks as if nobody had sat down there for weeks and weeks. Every other room of the White House second floor looks as if somebody loved it. But not the press conference room. Not that room, sisters mine!

● PLEASE DON'T TELL ME YOU'VE HEARD THIS. But if you have, it's worth a second laugh.

An important man and wife were guests of honor at a dinner the other night at the home of a couple who only hoped to be drastically important. An hour before the dinner, one guest dropped out with the grippe. The small daughter of the hostess was hastily substituted after a warning to "be very, very good. You're only being allowed to come because, otherwise, we would have 13 at the table."

Toward the end of the meal, the wife half of the important guest of honor said in an exasperated voice to the little daughter substitute: "You've been staring at me all evening, my dear. Tell me why."

"Because my mother said you drank like a fish," replied innocently at the party, "and I wanted to see how you do it."

LAFF-A-DAY

"I can't believe those 'litty bitsy seeds are responsible for all this!"

DIET AND HEALTH

Treating Disorders Of The Intestines

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHEN certain of the body parts are not working as they should, the conditions produced are called functional disturbances.
These functional disturbances frequently occur in the stomach and bowel although they may show up in almost any part of the body.

According to Doctor Walter Palmer of Chicago, the majority of patients with such disorders will respond to treatment which has for its purpose the restoring of the normal action of the bowel by the use of a proper diet, exercise, rest, and drugs which either relieve muscle spasm or quiet the nerves.

Diagnosis After Study

Diagnosis of a functional disturbance is made only after a careful study of the patient's difficulty.
The symptoms vary to a great extent. There may be a feeling of fullness, excessive gas in the bowel, pain in the abdomen or tenderness,
belching, sickness to the stomach,
loss of appetite, and constipation.
Doctor Palmer believes that in such patients the entire intestinal tract is over-irritable and that in the treatment an effort must be made to lessen this irritability.
Since all food and drink is more or less stimulating to the digestive organs, in some acute conditions, a period of starvation may be recommended. Doctor Palmer has listed foods according to their laxative action.

Less Laxative Foods

In the treatment of functional disturbances of the bowel, the foods which are less laxative are employed, and as the condition improves, the more laxative ones may be added. I have prepared a list of these foods and I shall be glad to send a copy of this list to all who desire it if they will write, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. Their names will not be used.

In addition to dietary treatment,
a period of bed rest may be necessary in some cases. However, exercises which are less laxative are employed, and as the condition improves, the more laxative ones may be added. I have prepared a list of these foods and I shall be glad to send a copy of this list to all who desire it if they will write, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. Their names will not be used.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

IT WAS the next afternoon when Terry came from the garden, a basket of roses caught over her arm, that Raff called out from the library, "What's the hurry?"

The door stood open. She could see him smiling over his drawing stand.

"Just want to get these in water," she said. "I cut them for the table tonight."

She was framed in the doorway.
"You make a mighty lovely picture, Miss Arnold," he said gently.
"I know now I should have kept on with my portrait studies."

"It must be the roses," Terry laughed.

"Come in and shut the door a minute, will you?" Raff was suddenly serious. After the door was shut he said, "Did you notice the way Brooks acted at lunch?"

"Why, yes. I thought he acted worried. But he is—about the tucuna."

"There's something more than that," Raff said. "Brooks wouldn't be so worried about just a few hec-tars of wheat. It's only that one field. Not a tenth of the crop is endangered."

Terry instinctively caught her breath. She knew exactly what he was thinking.

"You mean trouble with the peons?"

"That's right. It's been brewing for a long time. Brooks told me about it last night."

"I had a feeling—" Terry said vaguely.

"I was just wondering if stopping work on those houses didn't have something to do with it?"

Terry moved over to the window and stood looking out.

"You think they meant that much to the peons?" she asked.

"Not that so much," Raff said.
"I was thinking that if there was any real trouble, gitators for instance trying to incite the workers against Brooks, they could use that as bait against him."

"I hadn't thought of that," Terry said. "It would be damaging evidence."

She left soon and put the roses in water and went up to change and shower for dinner. While she stood under the shower she wondered if she should tell Brooks of Raff's suspicions. She decided against it. She knew Brooks—knew that it would not in any way alter his decision about the houses.

They were just finishing dinner
when Sandy burst into the room.
His face was scarlet and he carried his hat in his hand.

"I'm sorry to bother you, Brooks," he said quickly, "but the tucuna are swarming. It's this infernal heat. They're filling the trenches."

"Get all the peons to help."

"That's the trouble," he said. "I only have a handful. The rest won't work.
They're having some sort of a strike."

Brooks got up from the table.
"I'll put on old clothes," he said,
"and meet you at the stables in 10 minutes. We'll get at the bottom of this thing."

After Brooks had left Raff said,
"I think I'll go change, too. They can use all the help they can get."

"Maybe we could all help?" Terry suggested.

"I'll get the station wagon," Raff said, "as soon as I change. Maybe there WILL be work for us all."

As the station wagon spun along the dirt road that bordered the field, huge portable searchlights threw white bands of light across the scene. A handful of workers were digging madly to finish the trench. Their spades glinted in the strong light. At the far end of the trench red flames were leaping toward the sky. Billows of black smoke curled through the light.

"They've started to burn them out," Jim said. "But on this end they're breaking through."

Like a million tiny drums the sound of the pests pelted against the metal barrier rose in the night.
The wind was laden with oily smoke and the acrid smell of fish.

As they drew closer they could see Sandy on the back of the truck handing metal sheets down to the workers. He was stripped to the waist, the sweat gleaming on his powerful chest and shoulders. Raff parked the car and leaped out.

"You women wait here," he said.
"I'll see what we can do."

He walked over to where Sandy was working. "Do you think you can stop them?"

Sandy straightened for a moment. "Not unless we can get a lot more workers," he said. "The wind is shifting and bringing them right this way."

"Is there nothing more to be done?"

"I think we had better fire the field where they're rising," Sandy said. "I was in hopes we wouldn't have to—it'll spoil it for grazing.
Anyway, it's pretty green to burn,
but we can throw a little gasoline around. There are lots of thistles and pumas that are dry as a bone."

"Where's Brooks?" Raff asked.

"He's gone up to get more workers. He should be back any minute now."

"I'll set fire to the field," Raff said.

"There's gasoline in cans on the side of the truck over there by the edge of the road."

Raff walked quickly in the direction of the truck. A few minutes later smoke rose from the end of the field and flames licked hungrily into the dark. The green stand of grass sizzled and smoked, but the thistle and pumas crackled into flames. The tucuna took flight in the open field in great clouds and swept on the summer wind toward the barrier. It was burning out the young ones, but those that had found legs were swarming in flight.

Terry sat tensely watching the scene. She had a violent impulse to jump from the car and pitch in and help. She saw some idle spades in the grass where the workers had thrown them. She stifled her impulse doggedly. Raff had said to wait in the car until he came back.
She could see him moving about at the end of the field, spreading the fire.

Out of the dark she saw Brooks
step into the light of the flames.
He was talking urgently to Sandy and gesturing with his hands. She turned to Jim. "I'll be right back," she said, hurrying to where the two men were standing.

"You weren't able to get the peons to come?" she asked as she came up.

Brooks turned and when she saw his face she wished she had not asked the question. He had a hurt, baffled expression.

"No," he said slowly. "I went to all of them. I can't understand—" Sandy began to swear profusely.
"The dirty, low-lived scoundrels—"

Brooks swung around on him angrily. "Save your breath for digging," he ordered curtly, and started toward the field. Sandy spat once viciously, then followed.

CHEAP AT THE PRICE

THE Office of War Information, which asked for an appropriation of $42,000,000 for the next fiscal year, came through a House battle with only $18,000,000. The Senate has now restored nearly all of the House cut, on grounds which were summed up by Senator Ball of Minnesota.

To cut the duties of OWI, he said, would be "disastrous and may result in the loss of many American lives."

"It seems folly that after the huge expenditures for war in Europe, we should refuse our government the means of putting over a little doctrine of democracy. It is the cheapest insurance we can buy."

Opposition to the appropriation seems to have been based to a large extent upon the grounds that expenditure cuts had to begin some time and that the Army could do what propaganda work had to be done in occupied territory. But the Army itself did not agree with this, for statements from both General Marshall and General Eisenhower requested that the work of the OWI be carried on.

Certainly General Eisenhower, whose job it will be to deal with problems of occupation, should be able to judge the value of the work this agency has done. And anything which can save American lives is worth support.

PRESS-AGENTED STORMS

THE doings of the weather are not permitted to enjoy much privacy under modern scientific conditions. Until recent times, a storm could steal up on a section of the country and do its worst without more warning than that given by a view of the horizon.

Now a storm is press-agented all the way from Florida to the Carolinas. Recently a hurricane was watched by air and sea as it gathered force off the Florida coast, veered off and headed north, then turned with renewed violence towards Cape Hatteras.

These storm warnings permit ships to get into safe anchorage, and allow time to take precautions for the protection of life and property on shore. Hurricanes are still highly destructive, but their damage has been substantially mitigated.

It appears after all that humans are able to "do something about the weather," at least in its more violent manifestations.

Boys stopping over in this country between Germany and Japan are likely to be just a mite impatient with the lads who quit war production jobs because they don't offer a permanent future.

Inside WASHINGTON

Washington Gay Society Life | Duke and Duchess of Windsor
Has Purposeful Friendliness | Hope to Make Home in France

By HELEN ESSARY

WASHINGTON—Heaven knows there are enough books about Washington in existence—guide books, gossip volumes and historical tomes.

But the really useful book about Washington is yet to be written. Perhaps the one I have in mind should be done by an old-timer with a psychological turn of mind.

It should be something on the order of "How to Live Alone and Like It." Its title might be "How to Live in Washington and Keep Your Spirit High."

Washington is a cruel place. You must take it with your tongue in your cheek. You must keep constant watch that your sensitive skin does not toughen into a thick hide.

To a newcomer the pin pricks have the strength of stiletto thrusts. They are unexpected and very painful. The newcomer is likely to accept some excited party-giving as a sign of sincere friendliness.

Of course there is a kind of friendliness in the partying of the town. But it is a purposeful friendliness. A hectic sort of keeping up with the crowd. Of staying on view where important people meet.

Some fine, unaffected citizenry have come to town with the Truman administration. I hate to see them "learn to be Washingtonians." We are a rather overly smooth crowd here. And not too typical of America.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER
(Subbing for Mallon)

NEW YORK, July 5—It's my guess that Dave Elman just got fed up with radio programs giving things a way what's-your-name-where-do-you-live-right-here's-your-$50-next-contestant, etc.

Anyway the originator of radio's famed "Hobby Lobby" program has come up with a new one after much soul-searching and he's making people pay, but good, for the privilege of participating.

"Dave Elman's Auction Gallery" is the name of the new show, heard Tuesday nights, and it's exactly that—an auction—with no junk allowed.

For example, got $17,000 you're not using? That's the price brought by one of three original copies of Lincoln's emancipation proclamation which has sold on the show. This is the highest bid received for anything so far. But it's nothing for items to go for several hundred or a few thousand dollars. And bargains at that.

"Abraham Lincoln's breakfast table brought only $1,200," Elman explained. "It should have brought $5,000."

You don't visit a broadcast of "Auction Gallery" unless your intentions are honorable and your checking account healthy. The studio audience is gathered by invitation only and is composed of well-known collectors and habitués of auction galleries.

"They know value and won't let me down," Elman said.

Those in the studio have one minute in which to get in their bids after an item is announced. When the highest studio bid gets under the wire the radio audience is invited to submit its bids. Two weeks are allowed for these bids to come in by mail or wire. If none of the outside bids are better the high studio bidder gets the item.

Elman has seven paid assistants aiding him in tracking down worth-while items and he also gets the free-will services of a lot of experts interested in the show who know where and how certain things can be secured.

Other items that have been auctioned off so far include Adolf Hitler's dice, brought back from Berchtesgaden by a war correspondent; a dagger that once belonged to Rudolph Valentino, letters of famous people, a Civil War ventriloquist's dummy (not Charlie McCarthy), and an alarm clock which belonged to the late grand duke Paul of Russia. This last number brought $3,000 from a member of the studio audience. It not only strikes the hour but plays a military march 24 times a day.

Of course, it would be expecting too much for Elman to break completely with the times and give away absolutely nothing. So on each program there is a gag item. For example, the successful bidder for a powder horn received a whole steer through the courtesy of a packing company; the young married couple that made the highest bid for a glass of water from the river Jordan got an order for one baby carriage redeemable any time within five years; a woman who bid $20 for a canoe paddle found there was a canoe up in Breton Woods, N. H., that went with it and received a week's expenses-paid vacation for two so she could use the paddle.

The Summer let-down took added toll of the Broadway play list last week end. "The Hasty Heart," John Patrick's play about wounded men in an Asiatic hospital, quit after 204 performances. It will tour next Fall as one of the Theater Guild's subscription offerings, starting Sept. 21 in Bridgeport, Conn.

● SAW SOME INDICATION in the papers recently that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are planning to return to England. This, so some of their close friends tell me, is not true. The Windsors really want to go to France as soon as the war is comfortably over on the continent. An estate in the Riviera manner is their present ambition.

● I'D LIKE TO SAY SOMETHING about the new look of the White House (second floor) . . . that green sofa that used to be cat-a-corner in the Monroe room has its back to the door now. That green sofa was the sofa on which Mrs. Roosevelt used to sit, come press conference days. First there would be Mrs. Roosevelt, feet tucked under a bit—it is a low sofa. Next, Confidential Secretary Malvina Thompson, note book in hand and pencil flying. And next, Mrs. Helm, social secretary, note book more calmly in hand.

As I was saying, the faithful sofa has its back to the door now. The room looks as if nobody had sat down there for weeks and weeks. Every other room of the White House second floor looks as if somebody loved it. But not the press conference room. Not that room, sisters mine!

● PLEASE DON'T TELL ME YOU'VE HEARD THIS. But if you have, it's worth a second laugh. An important man and wife were guests of honor at a dinner the other night at the home of a couple who only hoped to be drastically important. An hour before the dinner, one guest dropped out with the grippe. The small daughter of the hostess was hastily substituted after a warning to "be very, very good. You're only being allowed to come because, otherwise, we would have 13 at the table."

Toward the end of the meal, the wife half of the important guest of honor said in an exasperated voice to the little daughter substitute: "You've been staring at me all evening, my dear. Tell me why."

"Because my mother said you drank like a fish," replied innocence at the party, "and I wanted to see how you do it."

DIET AND HEALTH

Treating Disorders Of The Intestines

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHEN certain of the body parts are not working as they should, the conditions produced are called functional disturbances. These functional disturbances frequently occur in the stomach and bowel although they may show up in almost any part of the body.

According to Doctor Walter Lincoln Palmer of Chicago, the majority of patients with such disorders will respond to treatment which has for its purpose the restoring of the normal action of the bowel by the use of a proper diet, exercise, rest, and drugs which either relieve muscle spasm or quiet the nerves.

Diagnosis After Study

Diagnosis of a functional disturbance is made only after a careful study of the patient's difficulty. The symptoms vary to a great extent. There may be a feeling of fullness, excessive gas in the bowel, pain in the abdomen or tenderness, belching, sickness to the stomach, loss of appetite, and constipation.

Doctor Palmer believes that in such patients the entire intestinal tract is over-irritable, and that in the treatment an effort must be made to lessen this irritability. Since all food and drink is more or less stimulating to the digestive organs, in some acute conditions, a period of starvation may be recommended. Doctor Palmer has listed foods according to their laxative action.

Less Laxative Foods

In the treatment of functional disturbances of the bowel, the foods which are less laxative are employed, and as the condition improves, the more laxative ones may be added. I have prepared a list of these foods and I shall be glad to send a copy of this list to all who desire it if they will write, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope. Their names will not be used.

In addition to dietary treatment, a period of bed rest may be necessary in some cases. However, exercises should be used in moderation as soon as the bed rest period is over. The drugs employed in the treatment of this condition consist of belladonna and phenobarbital. Bromides may also be used. Laxatives should not as a rule be employed and then only under the doctor's direction.

An effort should be made during the condition to reassure the patient, to restore his confidence and help him get rid of worries and troubles insofar as is possible.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

IT WAS the next afternoon when Terry came from the garden, a basket of roses caught over her arm, that Raff called out from the library. "What's the hurry?"

The door stood open. She could see him smiling over his drawing stand.

"Just want to get these in water," she said. "I cut them for the table tonight."

She was framed in the doorway. "You make a mighty lovely picture, Miss Arnold," he said gently. "I know now I should have kept on with my portrait studies."

"It must be the roses," Terry laughed.

"Come in and shut the door a minute, will you?" Raff was suddenly serious. After the door was shut he said, "Did you notice the way Brooks acted at lunch?"

"Why, yes. I thought he acted worried. But he is—about the tucura."

"There's something more than that," Raff said. "Brooks wouldn't be so worried about just a few hectares of wheat. It's only that one field. Not a tenth of the crop is endangered."

Terry instinctively caught her breath. She knew exactly what he was thinking.

"You mean trouble with the peons?"

"That's right. It's been brewing for a long time. Brooks told me about it last night."

"I had a feeling—" Terry said vaguely.

"I was just wondering if stopping work on those houses didn't have something to do with it?"

Terry moved over to the window and stood looking out.

"You think they meant that much to the peons?" she asked.

"Not that so much," Raff said. "I was thinking that if there was any real trouble, agitators for instance trying to incite the workers against Brooks, they could use that as bait against him."

"I hadn't thought of that," Terry said. "It would be damaging evidence."

She left soon and put the roses in water and went up to change and shower for dinner. While she stood under the shower she wondered if she should tell Brooks of Raff's suspicions. She decided against it. She knew Brooks—knew that it would not in any way alter his decision about the houses.

They were just finishing dinner when Sandy burst into the room. His face was scarlet and he carried his hat in his hand.

"I'm sorry to bother you, Brooks," he said quickly. "but the tucura are swarming. It's this infernal heat. They're filling the trenches."

"Get all the peons to help."

Sandy's face was stony. "That's the trouble," he said. "I only have a handful. The rest won't work. They're having some sort of a strike."

Brooks got up from the table. "I'll put on old clothes," he said, "and meet you at the stables in 10 minutes. We'll get at the bottom of this thing."

After Brooks had left Raff said, "I think I'll go change, too. They can use all the help they can get."

"Maybe we could all help?" Terry suggested.

"I'll get the station wagon," Raff said, "as soon as I change. Maybe there WILL be work for us all."

As the station wagon spun along the dirt road that bordered the field, huge portable searchlights threw white bands of light across the scene. A handful of workers were digging madly to finish the trench. Their spades glinted in the strong light. At the far end of the trench red flames were leaping toward the sky. Billows of black smoke curled through the light.

"They've started to burn them out," Jime said. "But on this end they're breaking through."

Like a million tiny drums the sound of the peats piling against the metal barrier rose in the night. The wind was laden with oily smoke and the acrid smell of fish.

As they drew closer they could see Sandy on the back of the truck handling metal sheets down to a worker. He was striped to the waist, the sweat gleaming on his powerful chest and shoulders. Raff parked the car and leaped out.

"You women wait here," he said. "I'll see what we can do."

He walked over to where Sandy was working. "Do you think you can stop them?"

Sandy straightened for a moment. "Not unless we can get a lot more workers," he said. "The wind is shifting and bringing them right this way."

"Is there nothing more to be done?"

"I think we had better fire the field where they're rising," Sandy said. "I was in hopes we wouldn't have to—it'll spoil it for grazing. Anyway, it's pretty green to burn, but we can throw a little gasoline around. There are lots of thistles and pumas that are dry as a bone."

"Where's Brooks?" Raff asked.

"He's gone up to get more workers. He should be back any minute now."

"I'll set fire to the field," Raff said.

"There's gasoline in cans on the side of the truck over there by the edge of the road."

Raff walked quickly in the direction of the truck. A few minutes later smoke rose from the end of the field and flames licked hungrily into the dark. The green stand of grass sizzled and smoked, but the thistles and pumas cracked into flames. The tucura took flight in the path of flame. They rose from the open field in great clouds and swept on the summer wind toward the barrier. It was burning out the young ones, but those that had found legs were swarming in flight.

Terry sat tensely watching the scene. She had a violent impulse to jump from the car and pitch in and help. She saw some idle spades in the grass where the workers had thrown them. She stifled her impulse doggedly. Raff had said to wait in the car until he came back. She could see him moving about at the end of the field, spreading the fire.

Out of the dark she saw Brooks step into the light of the flames. He was talking urgently to Sandy and gesturing with his hands. She turned to Jime. "I'll be right back," she said, hurrying to where the two men were standing.

"You weren't able to get the peons to come?" she asked as she came up.

Brooks turned and when she saw his face she wished she had not asked the question. He had a hurt, baffled expression.

"No," he said slowly. "I went to all of them. I can't understand."

Sandy began to swear profusely. "The dirty, low-lived scoundrels—"

Brooks swung around on him angrily. "Save your breath for digging," he ordered curtly, and started toward the field. Sandy spat once viciously, then followed.

It was a good thing for North that he knew how to play his cards on the defense. Otherwise his double would merely have presented a game and some extra points to his opponents.

When South led his club K, North saw that he could overtake with the A, blank himself in hearts by playing the A, then put South back in the lead with a club to the Q. So he did exactly that. South then scored his heart K and led the heart J. That was the killing stroke. If East used a small spade from dummy, North could take the setting trick at once with the J. East feared that, since North had discarded on the heart K. Consequently he came in with the A so it could not be overruled.

East hoped that he then could play for a lucky trump break, finding the J held by the defender who had only two trumps. If that developed, the K and Q would take out the last defense trump. But the defenders' trumps were not divided that way. As they were, it was impossible for East to keep North from taking the spade trick that set him.

Notice how hopeless the defenders' effort would have been if North had not overtaken the original club lead with his A.

Logan Elm Grange Has Party For Six Veterans

150 Are Present For Large Reception And Dinner

Returned veterans were seated at a long table decorated in red, white and blue, when 150 members of the Logan Elm Grange met Tuesday at the Pickaway county school to honor the soldiers and two recently married couples.

Honored guests at the meeting were Pvt. Hoyt Timmons, Pvt. Virgil Timmons, Sgt. John Stuckey, Cpl. Ned Enoch and Lester Wolford and Fred Kitchen, who have been honorably discharged. The newly married couples feted were Mr. and Mrs. Harding Smith and Cpl. and Mrs. Lawrence Curl. On the stage was a large "Welcome" sign and in the center of the stage stood a sheaf of wheat, around which was the emblem of the grange. At each corner large urns of hollyhocks were placed. Twenty small tables, decorated with miniature flags, surrounded the long table at which the honored guests and speakers were seated.

The program was opened with the pledge of allegiance and group singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Marilyn Miller presented the flag. A flute solo was offered by Mac Wolf, accompanied by his sister, Patty.

A response was given by the guests and each father, who has a son in the service, who was absent from the group, gave a report on where their son is stationed. A violin solo by Jean Sherret, accompanied by Martha Sherret, was followed by a reading by Mrs. C.A. Dresbach.

Mrs. Joseph W. Fichter, state master's wife, was the main speaker for the group. She explained the grange work, since its beginning after the Civil War. It was organized in August, 1848, by Oliver Hudson Kelley, for the purpose of bringing the North and South together.

Miss Christina Van Gordon, state president of the Better Business Women's club, gave a short address to the group.

The program was closed with a service by the Rev. S. C. Elsea and the group singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Anderson were chairmen of the refreshment committee, and they were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kreitzel, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. May, Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Leist, Miss Dorothy Anderson, Mr. Leo Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Turner Pontius.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Graves had charge of the decorations. Miss Mary McKenzie, made and donated the rose corsages for the brides and guest speakers. Mrs. Pontius was chairman of the program, assisted by Mrs. Vera Miller.

Westminster Class Has Picnic Supper

A picnic supper was served to members of the Westminster Bible class of the Presbyterian church, Tuesday evening at Ted Lewis park.

Eighteen members were present for the regular meeting of the Daughters of Union Veterans, Tuesday evening in the post room of Memorial hall. Mrs. L. E. Foreman, president, presided at the meeting.

It was voted to purchase a flag for the shelter house in the Ted Lewis park. The flag will be presented after the shelter is completed. A memorial service was conducted for the departed members by Mrs. E. L. Tolbert, president of the Ohio Department. Mrs. James Pierce presided at the piano.

The club will have a recess during the month of July and the next meeting is planned for August 7th.

Country Club Has 150 For Picnic

Picnic baskets were taken to the Pickaway Country club by 150 members and their families and guests in celebration of the July 4th.

Games for the children included races, a kite flying contest and a doll show.

Games were played during the evening by the adults and prizes were awarded.

Class Picnic Planned

Class of 1937 of the Pickaway township school will have their picnic at Gold Cliff park, Sunday, July 8. All members and their families are invited and each is asked to bring a picnic basket.

Wife Preservers

When you wear rubber gloves to protect your hands while doing rough work, sometimes water runs up the gloves and onto the arms when hands are lifted. To prevent this, turn the tops of the gloves back for about one inch, and in the fold thus formed put a ring of absorbent cotton. This will effectively catch any water which would otherwise run down your raised arms.

Halter-Fashion Dress

Brown and white striped cotton, and plain white cotton, is used by a New York designer to make a junior dress.

THE cotton fabrics in this dress combine to give a halter effect to what is really a one-piece design. The striped fabric is used on the bias to accentuate the slim lines of the model. The self-fabric belt has a tailored buckle of plastic to match the big wafer buttons.

Guests at the home of Mrs. G. H. Colvill, West Franklin street, for the holiday included her daughters, Mrs. A. J. Cassidy, Zanesville, Mrs. C. H. Lucas, Columbus, her grandson, Mr. George Cassidy, Mansfield, and her great granddaughter, Miss Nancy Lucas, Piqua.

Miss Mary Jane Lowe, Columbus, was the holiday guest of her aunt, Miss Josephine Bartley, East Main street.

Logan Elm Grange Has Party For Six Veterans

150 Are Present For Large Reception And Dinner

Returned veterans were seated at a long table decorated in red, white and blue, when 150 members of the Logan Elm Grange met Tuesday at the Pickaway county school to honor the soldiers and two recently married couples.

Honored guests at the meeting were Pvt. Hoyt Timmons, Pvt. Virgil Timmons, Sgt. John Stuckey, Cpl. Ned Enoch and Lester Wolford and Fred Kitchen, who have been honorably discharged. The newly married couples feted were Mr. and Mrs. Harding Smith and Cpl. and Mrs. Lawrence Curl.

On the stage was a large "Welcome" sign and in the center of the stage stood a sheaf of wheat, around which was the emblem of the grange. At each corner large urns of hollyhocks were placed. Twenty small tables, decorated with miniature flags, surrounded the long table at which the honored guests and speakers were seated.

The program was opened with the pledge of allegiance and group singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Marilyn Miller presented the flag. A flute solo was offered by Mac Wolf, accompanied by his sister, Patty.

A response was given by the guests and each father, who has a son in the service, who was absent from the group, gave a report on where their son is stationed. A violin solo by Jean Sherret, accompanied by Martha Sherret, followed by a reading by Mrs. C.A. Dresbach.

Mrs. Joseph W. Fichter, state master's wife, was the main speaker for the group. She explained the grange work, since its beginning after the Civil War. It was organized in August, 1848, by Oliver Hudson Kelley, for the purpose of bringing the North and South together.

Miss Christina Van Gordon, state president of the Better Business Women's club, gave a short address to the group.

The program was closed with a service by the Rev. S. C. Elser and the group singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Anderson were chairmen of the refreshment committee, and they were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kreitzel, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. May, Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Leist, Miss Dorothy Anderson, Mr. Leo Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Turney Pontius.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Graves had charge of the decorations. Miss Mary McKenzie, made and donated the rose corsages for the brides and guest speakers. Mrs. Pontius was chairman of the program, assisted by Mrs. Vera Miller.

OBITUARY

Andrew J. Warner, son of the late Jerome H. Warner and Sadie Valentine Warner was born in Washington Township Nov. 3, 1895, departed this life June 28th at Grant hospital—age 49 years—7 months and 18 days.
In his early youth he was baptized in the United Brethren Faith. His entire life was spent in the immediate vicinity, being devoted to farming and mechanical endeavor.
On June 30th, 1917, he was united in marriage with Miss Wil-na T. Barr, who with three children, Nelson E. of the U. S. Air Force stationed in England, Jerome M. of the U. S. Ordnance Division, furloughed from South America and Maynard E. at home, survive, left to mourn the loss of a faithful and devoted husband and a kind, affectionate and loving father.

He also leaves his recently widowed Mother of Circleville, two sisters, Mrs. Ray Heffner of near Ashville, and Mrs. John Heffner of near Circleville and three grand children.

During his extended illness he bore his sufferings with little complaint, always cheerful, always patient having the greatest consideration for those who waited upon him greeting all with a cheerful smile.

The many neighbors, friends and relatives bear proof of their high appreciation of his splendid life and true character by their presence in his sickness and death.

For many years he was a member of the Logan Elm Grange also a charter member of the local P. T. A. serving as treasurer for both organizations for a number of years and his presence will be greatly missed by all.

Harvest That Seed

Harvesting enough red clover seed this summer to meet national requirements is one of the important jobs farmers face.

Word comes from Washington that about 120 million pounds of seed are needed, some 15 percent more than was produced in 1944. Use of farming practices that will result in high yields is urged, since the acreage harvested will probably be about the same as last season. Saving additional acreage for harvest would be desirable, it is emphasized.

Producing red clover seed should be profitable for farmers in 1945, government reports indicate, with prospects of strong demand and favorable prices. Special assistance is available to farmers who harvest this seed, under the Agricultural Adjustment Agency program.

Important as a source of hay and pasture, red clover is also considered one of the best crops for soil-improvement purposes. Where suitable stands and growth can be secured, as in the northern states, there is no better legume for use in regular rotations, according to agronomists. Large amounts of organic matter are left in the soil after clover is turned under, and when used as a cover it holds the soil against erosion.

To send American bombers to their first assault on Rome and bring them back to base took 581,000 gallons of gasoline.

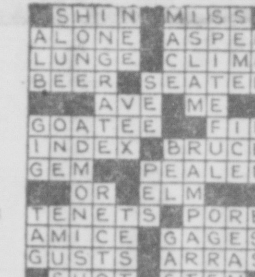

A true Midsummer Night's Dream, according to Zadok Dumbkopf, is a single, big basket consisting of corn-on-the-cob, watermelon and strawberry shortcake.

A 100-year-old widower has wed again. Probably just couldn't stand seeing the month of June go by without doing something about it.

Men of the 76th Ordnance Company converted an old French bus, formerly used by the Germans, into a shop trailer.

KALTENBORN SUBS

H. V. Kaltenborn will take over Bill Stern's "Sports Weekly" for three weeks starting Friday, July 6.

"MYSTERY IN THE AIR"

The new and timely spine-tingling series, "Mystery in the Air," which replaces the Abbott and Costello show Thursday, is likely to set a fresh trend in thriller dramas. Starring an ex-Marine, Stephen Courtleigh, popular young Broadway actor, the series deals with a former G-2 man who returns home to battle the enemy within and whatever dangers crop up in the post-war period. Such sinister possibilities as the Nazis and Japs returning after defeat to plague the world with underground movements will be highlighted on the new series.

Paul (no relation) Winchell, the network ventriloquist comedy star, goes into the Waldorf-Astoria's famous Starlight Roof July 19. Three major film studios are bidding for Sigmund Romberg's latest singing discovery, the young soprano Victoria Schools. Emmerich Kalman, composer of the new musical, "Marinka," starring Joan Roberts, the network thrush was injured in a taxi smash-up this week. Jack Durant, the radio, screen and stage comedy star, will have his own network show this fall.

Two tuneless favorites of Roy Acuff fans, "Home in San Antonio" and "Wait for the Light to Shine," are sung by the popular mountain crooner on the "Grand Ole Opry" show, Saturday, The Old Hickory Singers harmonize "Sleep, Kentucky Babe" and "That Pioneer Mother of Mine."

Timmie Hyler, glamor girl and actress who has been date bait for service men on "Blind Date," goes overseas soon with an important role in the USO Camp Shows production of "What A Life."

Walter Kinsella, the dour-tongued Sgt. Mullins of "Mr. and Mrs. North," has also been added to the cast of the new comedy series, "That's My Pop," which stars Hugh Herbert.

Paula Stone is one radio personality who isn't superstitious. The office where she plans her programs is on the thirteenth floor of a well known New York building. Her office number is thirteen.

Her efficient secretary, June Winters, was the thirteenth girl Miss Stone interviewed when she was looking for an assistant. What's more—the inaugural of her present series took place on the thirteenth day of the month!

One radio show already has a cast of television veterans. It's the Saturday crime series, "The FBI in Peace and War," which boasts such players as Arthur Vinton, Elaine Williams and Arnold Moss, all of whom have appeared in pioneering television shows. Grace Albert, pretty switchboard operator of the series, has already been signed by a sponsor to a television contract, to start as soon as the sight-and-sound medium becomes a commercial reality.

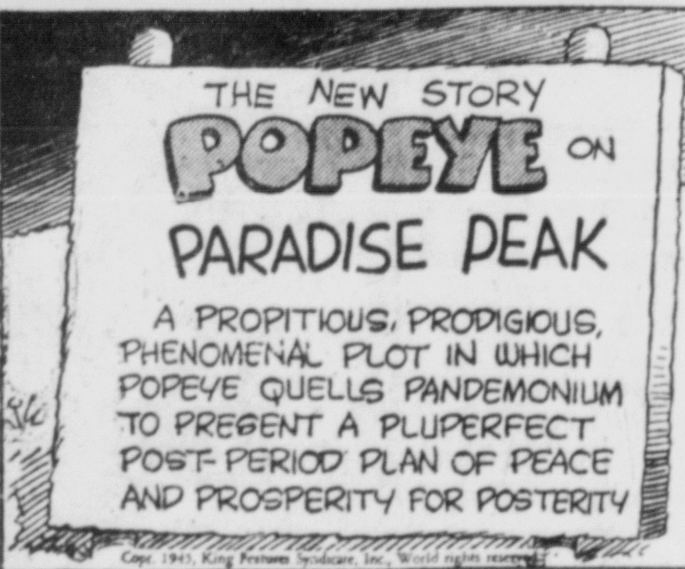

Again playing the role of a mother in radio plays, Alice Yourman has just been cast as Mrs. Anderson, of "The Aldrich Family," mother of Kathleen, Henry's girl friend. (Her only non-mother role is on "Two on a Clue," in which she takes the announcing honors.) Alice feels that the role of Mrs. Anderson will be pretty lucky for her, as Cathryn Anderson is the name of her grandmother!

COUNCIL PLANS WATER DECISION NEXT TUESDAY

City May Start Operation Of Water Plant In The Near Future

Members of Circleville city council will meet Tuesday, July 10, as a committee of the whole to plan future action of the city in efforts to acquire the local plant of the Ohio Water Service company.

At the meeting of council Tuesday night City Solicitor J. W. Adkins and Tom A. Renick, assistant in the case, reported to council on the status of the case. They said that both the water company and the city had filed motions for new trial of the case which ended last Saturday. Judge Earl Parker has set July 12 as the date for hearing of the motions, they reported.

Mr. Adkins and Mr. Renick said that the city could take over operation of the plant as soon as the $420,000 valuation set by the jury is paid if the court overrules the motions for new trial and issues a court order. Or the city can wait while the water company carries the case to a higher court, as it is expected to do.

First reading was given an ordinance which appropriates an additional $600 for witness fees and other expenses in connection with the trial. The ordinance also included a $500 appropriation for a city engineer and an unspecified amount for Ted Lewis park. The new appropriation brought to $1,600 the amount appropriated for expenses for the trial.

A petition from Morris O. Glick, Barnes avenue, asking council to provide sewer service for the street, was referred to the service committee.

The four councilmen present approved a motion to order the service department to plug a sanitary sewer to prevent the Winorr canning company from dumping industrial waste into the line.

The financial report given by Councilman George Crites showed the following balances as of July 1, 1945: general fund, $17,791.21; sewage disposal fund, $12,369.50; library fund, $10,447.13; auto street repair fund, $7,971.46; gas tax fund, $487.02; Berger hospital fund, $4,869.54. Parking meter collections for the month of June totaled $1,049.39.

The relief report showed that the city's net cost of relief for May was $277.60.

Mayor Ben H. Gordon reported the collection of $25 in fines and $121 in bonds, making a total collection of $146.

Councilmen Carl Mason, Boyd Horn and Troy White were absent.
